PRESS RELEASE: It Was Not Here – the new album release from The Afterthought.

Applicable genres: Rock/pop and alternative.

Wooden Fish are proud to present the first official album release from The Afterthought, titled It Was Not Here. Please find your promotional copy enclosed.

The Afterthought has two members, Tom Flint and Colin Williams, who are responsible for the album's song writing, performances and production.

It Was Not Here is a truly independent record, produced on a very low budget without major label involvement. The album contains 16 tracks in all, ranging from fairly aggressive guitar, keyboard and vocal blasts to some relatively gentle songs based around acoustic piano melodies. If time is limited, however, please consider the first three songs as a representative taster of the whole.

For genre reference, although the music contains elements of punk, progressive rock, new wave, and dance, a modern music shop would undoubtedly place it on the shelves along with the 'rock pop' releases.

It Was Not Here can be bought from the band's website (www.theafterthought.com) after its official release date of October 1st 2005.

Further information about the band and the album can be obtained by visiting the Press pages on The Afterthought's site. The Press section also provides a selection of downloadable files sanctioned for editorial use.
